HER DAILY LIFE CONTRASTED WITH THAT OF HER HUSBAND.

She Never Has Time to Break Down-She Has to Laber from Ten to Sixteen Hours a Day, While the Father Works Eight Hours or Less-Her Cheerless Life. It seems to be accented as a fact that woman in contrast with man is far the weaker. The reasons for it are not quite clear, and perhaps to frequent repetition it owes its greatest force. In the matter of brute strength certainly to women must be given second place, but when it comes to endurance, which is scarcely separable from strength, in many situations in life she would most awaredly show berself able to hear far heavier burdens than man. Probably nowhere else is this truth as apparent as in the sickroom. There man and woman meet on an equal footing, neither having any advantage. And it is there that she proves that instead of being the weaker she s infinitely the stronger and more endur-

Let a wife be taken ill, and for twentyfour hours the husband is untiring in his devotion, and very likely he scarcely leaves her bedside. The second day finds him still at his post, but he is beginning to weaken; even the loss of one night's sleep has nearly "broken him up." But the third day he is comparatively a wreck, and ready to yield his place as nurse to any one

Not so, however, with the wife when he "E. & W." Collars 18 cts., is ill. Day after day and night after night she hangs over him, hever for a moment thinking of intrusting him to the care of another. If she sleeps, it is in her chair by his bedside while he doses. She scarcely lies down, and perhaps for weeks and weeks only removes her clothes for a change of linen. And yet she never seems to tire; and, as a matter of fact, many frail women seem actually to gain strength when exposed to such hardships. The world may accept that woman is the weaker, but no physician who has been long in practice will be convinced that

MAN AND WIFE COMPARED. Man compares with woman as does cast iron with steel. He is strong, and yet is comparatively easily shattered, whereas you can bend her, you can put her to tests which would, figuratively speaking, pul-verize him, and yet you cannot "break her up." Take her outside of the sick room. She is-at least many married women are the table can be "cleared off" her children must be scrubbed, combed, etc., for school. With them out of the house, unless there is a baby in the family-and there almost niways is one in the home of every poor, overworked woman—she has a breathing spell. But it cannot last long, for there are the dishes to wash, the kitchen to "tidy," the chamber work to do, and when these and other customary duties are performed it is time to get dinner. That ought to be off the table and "things put away" by 2 or half past 2, and then she has BISHOP WM. TAYLOR, reached her first opportunity to rest.

But she does not rest, although she may think she does, for she generally sews until supper time and returns to her sewing after supper dishes are cleared away, and she is not likely to lay aside her needle un-til bedtime comes. But this is the routine work of only about one day in the week. Very likely Monday is washing day, and on Tuesday there is the ironing to do. Wed-nesday is one of the cooking days with almost all women. Thursday is the day we have partially described, and is called the easy day. Friday the broom must be called into special service, and a general sweeping The following transfers of real estate takes place. The administrator did not care to only in health does woman show her superiority over man in the way of strength and Good endurance, but it is the same in disease. Attacks which man is likely to succumb to are less likely to prove fatal in woman. Perhaps in consumption, as well as any other malady, is the fact apparent. It is safe to say that, take a man and a woman in the early stage of lung disease, and if one attack be of the same severity as the other the woman will outlast the man by many months, and possibly by years.

One case which the writer recalls well illustrates this fact. It is that of a woman who became consumptive nearly twenty years ago. From that time on she had small but frequent hemorrhages. They would weaken her some, but she would soon regain her usual strength. Ten years ago she went with friends to Europe and traveled from place to place for a year, After she returned she failed, but slowly. "The most valuable thing about this whole car," said an electric engineer, "was discovered more of less by accident. It shows how difficult it is even for expert incentors to foresee the effects of their work. You know heretofore the great trouble has been to get electric motors which were strong enough to start the car without les-ing an enormous amount of force. It is easy enough to keep a car moving after it is once started. The trouble is the dead mon experiences of about three-fourths of weight at the beginning. The motor on all our women, with them it is work, work, this car can be disconnected from the axles by turning a lever, so that the motor keeps ment which they can call their own; in going even after the car is stopped. Accordingly, when the car is stopped, I turn off the electricity, and the motor keeps moving from its own momentum. It is usually so I connect the motor with the axle before I turn on the electricity. The momentum of the motor starts the car and gets it well under way before it is necessary to turn the electricity on. That's one of the most they, somehow or other, manage to "pull valuable features of the whole thing, and themselves together" by Monday, so as to yet it may be classed almost as a discovery."-New York Sun.
